A safari is a trip you take to see animals in their natural habitats. A guide drives you around and tells you about all the amazing animals.

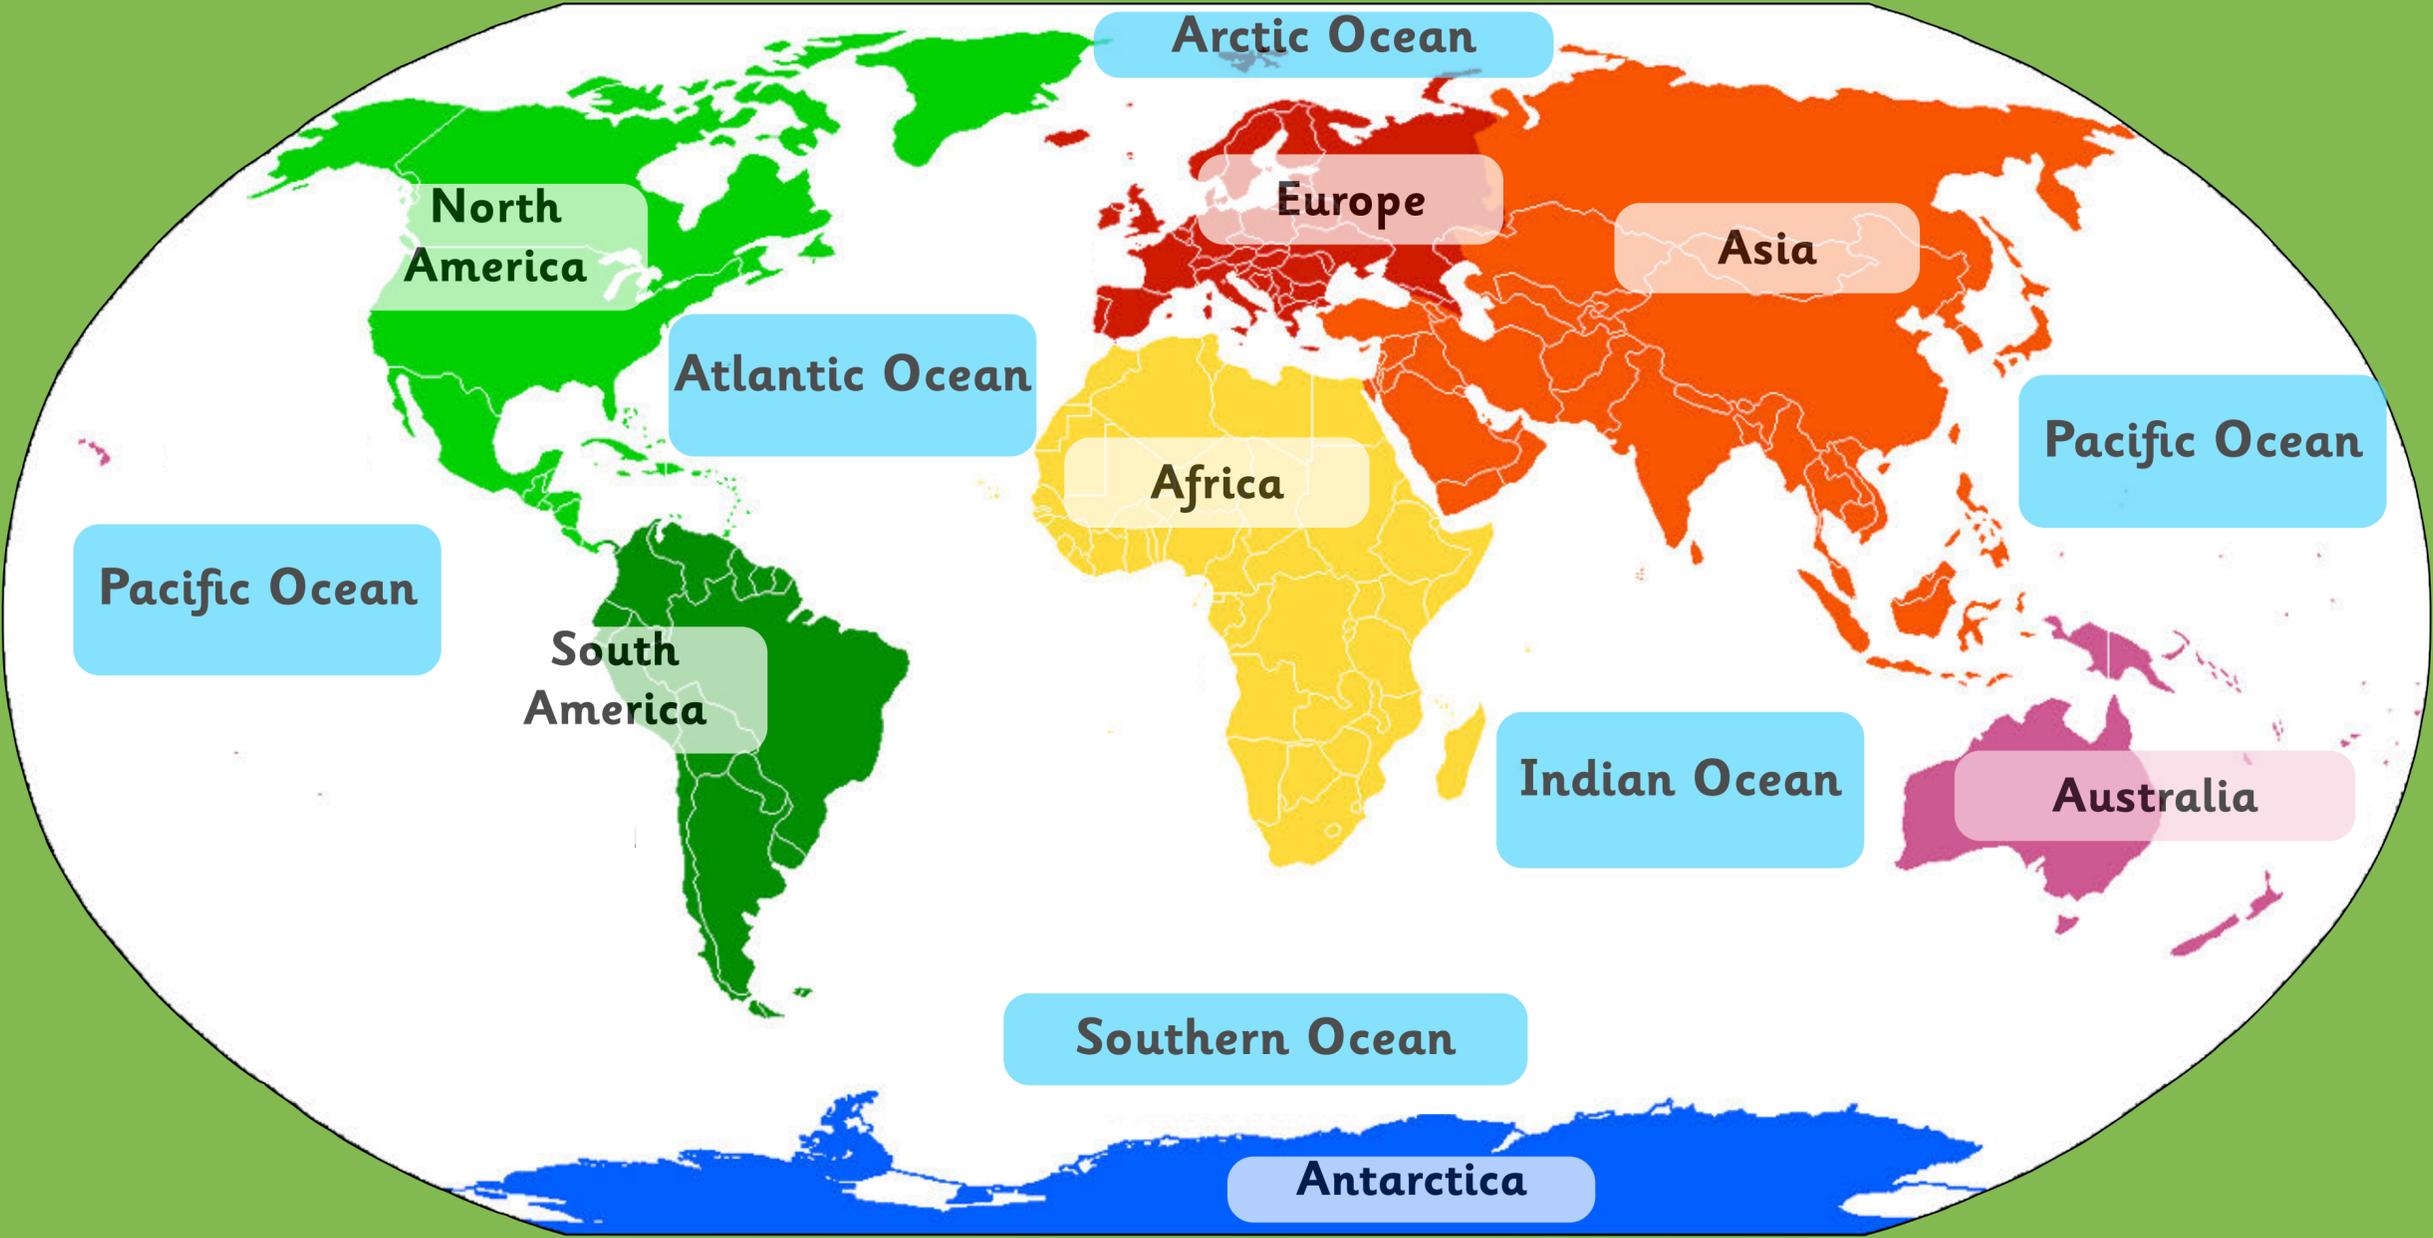

When you go on safari, you can often get really close to animals you would never normally get to see. This is because the guide knows where the animals are and how to behave around them so you stay safe.

We are going to go on safari in a country called Kenya to see some of the wildlife there.

Do you know where Kenya is?

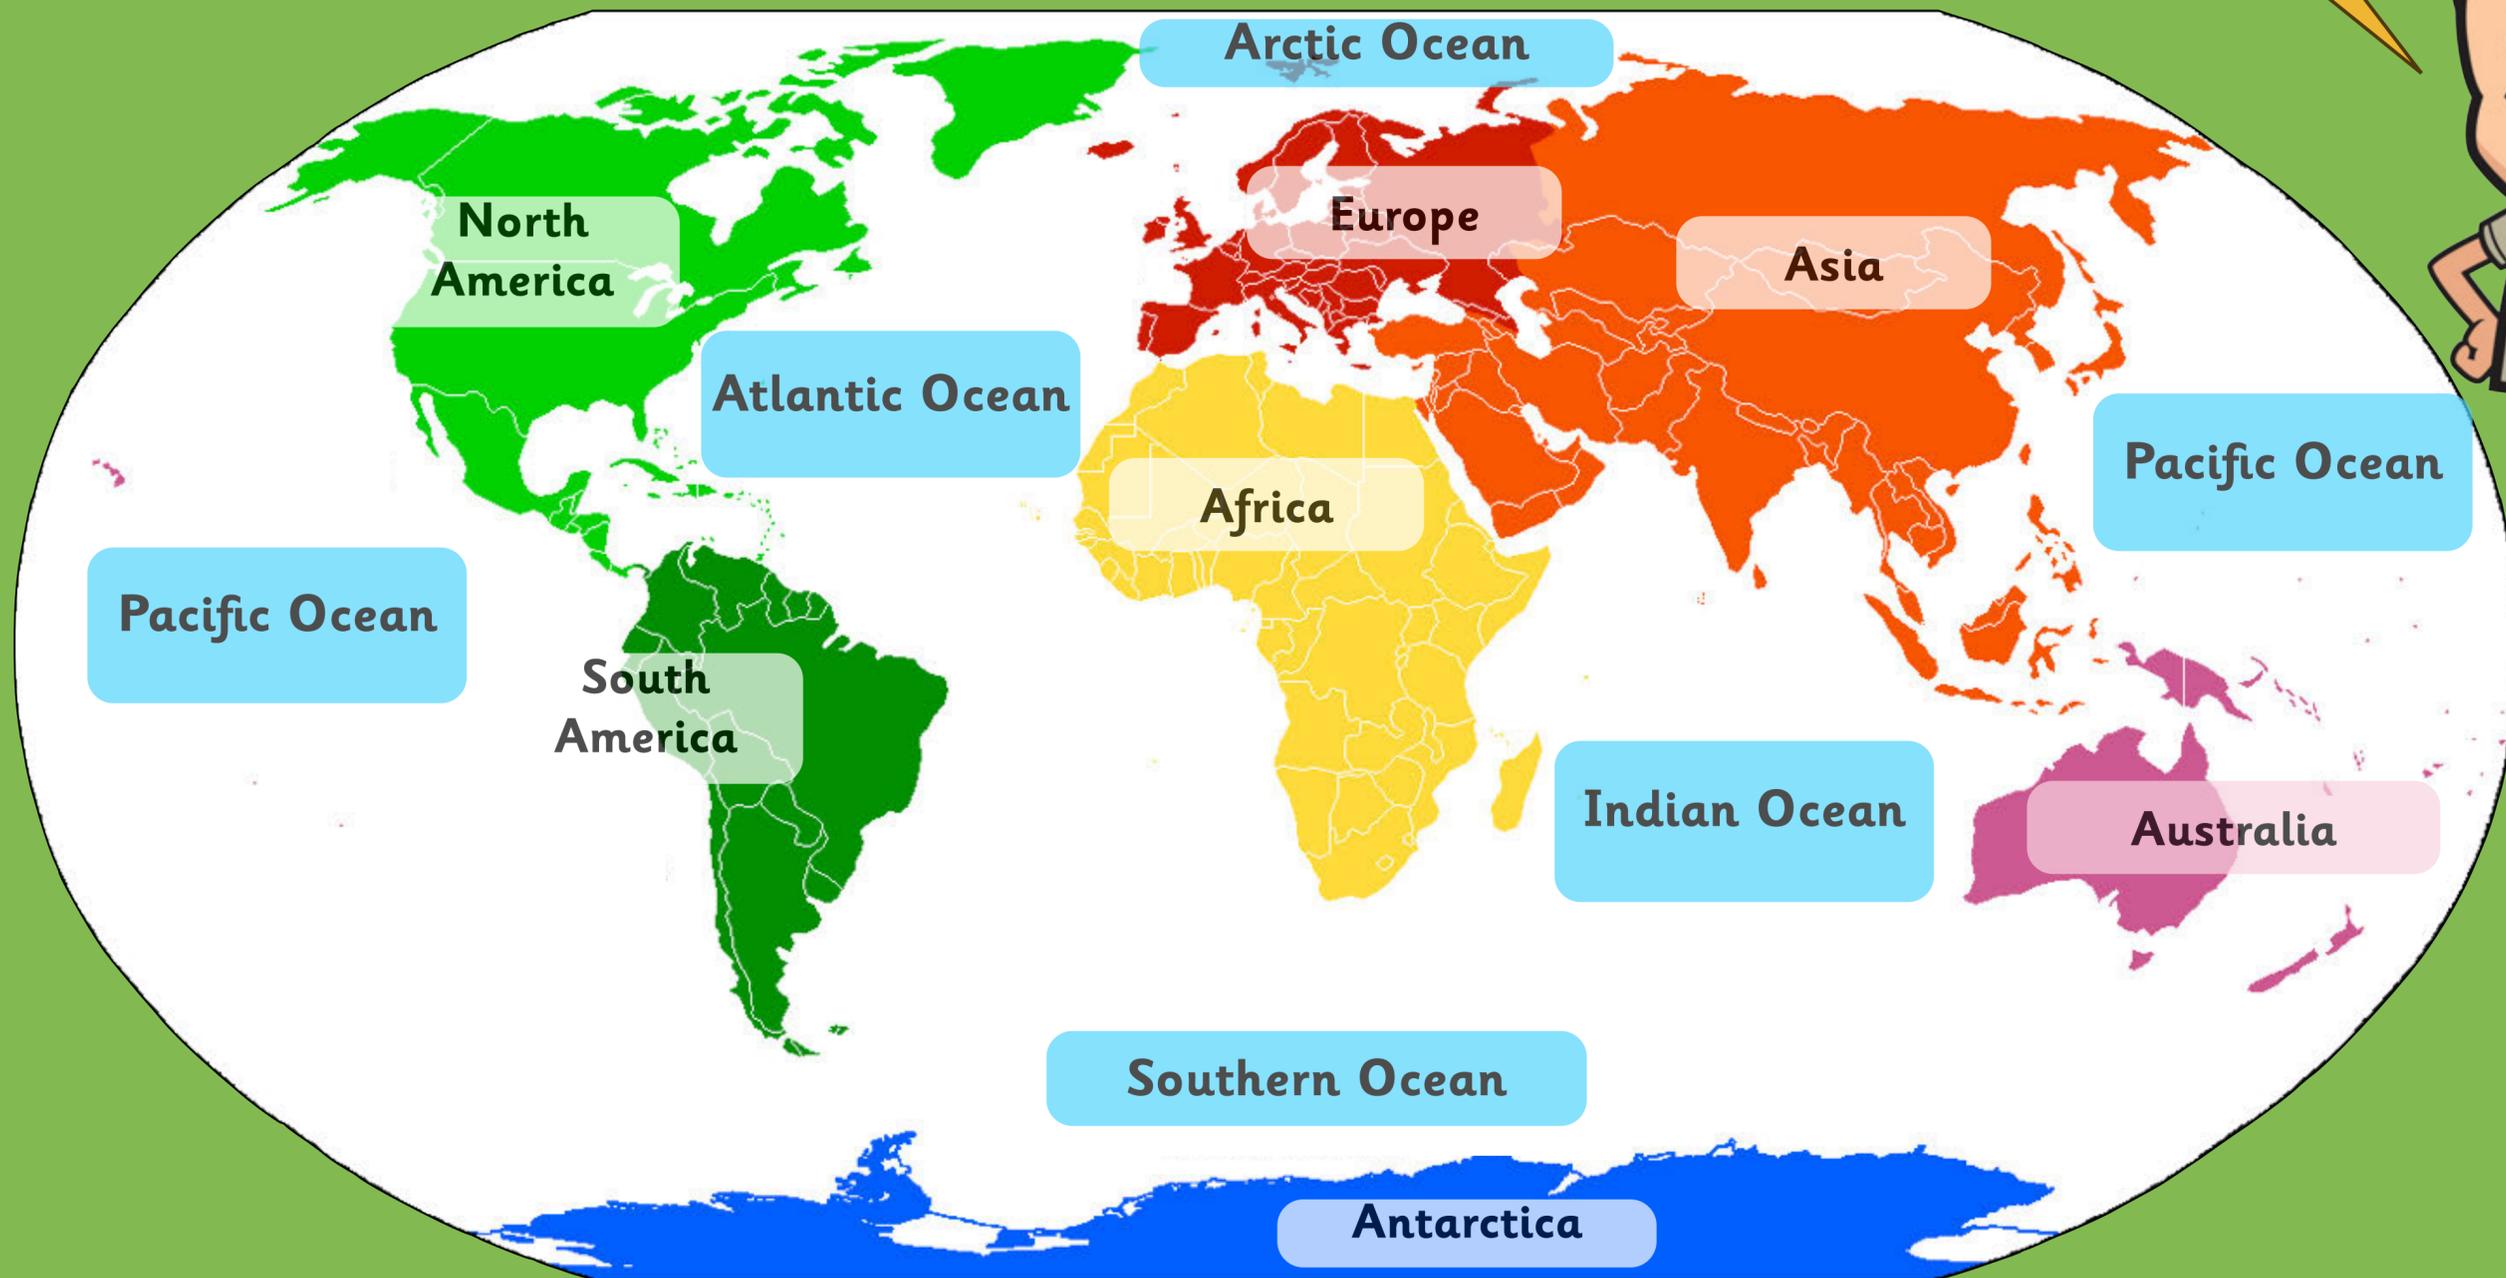

The world is split up into seven large areas of land called continents. This map shows the continents and the five oceans that surround them.

Each continent (apart from Antarctica where it is too cold for people to live) is split up into countries. Each country has its own government to run the country and make laws. Countries also have their own flags, cultures and traditions that make them different to any other country.

I live in a country called England which is in the continent of Europe. England is part of the United Kingdom which is made up of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. Where do you live?

This label shows where the UK is on a world map.
