

Black History Month

For our Black History month learning, we made posters and learnt about the Windrush generation. The Windrush generation are Jamaican people and Caribbean people who were invited from their homes to Britain for amazing job opportunities. This happened straight after WW2, so Britain needed repairing because the air raids and bombings did so much damage.

They arrived in the Empire Windrush ship (which our class has been making models of) and were very excited. Unfortunately, they were mistreated and found it hard to make friends. Their children were bullied. They also found it hard to make & get jobs. This led to them not having good homes or money.

We learnt about how the victims of the Windrush are ~~been~~ being affected now. Some are being deported and sacked by the government. They were also promised compensation money, which was delayed. This shows that racism isn't gone and that the government is indirectly racist.

We are creating Windrush boats, which help us see what ship they travelled in while having fun! When we made posters of an inspiring dark-skinned person, it showed me that skin & colour doesn't matter.
