Call my bluff...

Glabella is...

1. (or Glabla) the small hammer like object found inside a bicycle bell. It is the part that actually strikes the bell when the lever is pulled. It comes from the Old English 'Glah Bell' which translates as Bell Gong.
2. actually the space between the eyebrows. It may be more pronounced in some people, or absent in others, but for those who have it, it is the hairless part of the forehead between the eyebrows.
3. simply the name of the small metal covering that appears on the toes of some shoes and boots.
