Education Welfare Officer

The school now has an Education Welfare Officer (EWO) working with us. The role of an EWO is to ensure that attendance remains high and to take action when any pupils are failing to attend school regularly. An EWO inspects the school's registers, looking for patterns in children's absence that indicate a problem. They also monitor instances of lateness and may set up meetings with parents if poor punctuality is an issue. It was shocking and extremely disappointing to see nine children arrive late for school in one class this morning. I am very pleased to say that is not the norm, however it is definitely not acceptable as it means that over an hour of learning time was lost.

We need to say a huge thank you to Miss Vidya, our inspirational yoga and PRE teacher, for leading an extremely interesting and fun assembly this week. The children played an active part in teaching the school about the new year and instilling the core principals of yoga - to establish peace in your mind, body and soul. The children thoroughly enjoyed this interactive spectacle!

Key dates coming up:

- Friday 17th January—NHS hearing tests will be taking place at 09:30 - please ensure you submit consent forms by Wednesday 15th January
- Tuesday 14th January - Avanti Life trip to Avanti House taking place for School council representatives
- Tuesday 21st January - E-safety workshop for parents

Week 14 - Friday 10th January 2020

Times tables

This term we will be having a major push on the learning of times tables across the year groups. Please help your child to learn the times tables. We will be holding a workshop later in the term to help you with this if you would like to discover some interesting ways on how to make the learning of times tables easier and more fun.

In the meantime, here are some useful links to fun interactive games that you could try together with you child at home:

Free Reading Books!

Do you sometimes run out of books at home for your child to read? Are there times where you would like to go to the public library but do not have the time? Oxford Owls is a website that offers reading books for children, for free. Simply click on the website link below, register for free and get reading!

E-safety Workshop

A parent workshop will be held for parents at 8.15 am on Tuesday 21st January. Please register your interest at the office if you wish to attend. The primary aim of the workshop is to help parents to be aware of potential risks and provide you with guidance on how to keep your children safe online.
